Arrived here, her difficulties recurred, with upon us I mean the condition of political or perhaps, rather, to be an important link in a

The full significance of the present crisis has alian of events which together constitute an enoch. The first link in this chain was Lord Palmerston's death; then came the disruption of the Liberal party last Session on their dealing breach in the opposite ranks from the same cause; and, lastly, we have Lord Derby's formal innouncement to his party that he intends at an early period to withdraw from their leader-It used to be a common saying during the last years of Lord Palmerston's life, that after him there would be a great change in the state of parties—a new shuffle of the cards. But things seldom turn out in the exact way and at the precise time that is expected. The singular vitality of old watch words and party-organizations enabled them to survive Lord Palmerstor nor is there any saying how long they migh have lasted had not the crucial test of the Re form question been applied to them. This question, not inaptly called the touch stone of parties, first resolved the great Liberal party into its component elements, and this in more efficiently than was memifested by the patent fact of the formation of a Cave. Perhans Mr. Brand could tell us the exact numerical relations of Liberals and Democrats within the bosom of the same party. The same question has now resolved the great Conservative party into its component elements, and this far more efficiently than is manifested by the seccesion of three prominent members from the Cabinet; for boit the heart has been cut out of the Concarrative party. These men were the most representative men of their party; till yesterday they were supposed to represent in an especial manner the sentiments and feelings and opinions of the country party.

I say till yesterday, for, since the late meeting t the Carlton Club, has not a change come over he spirit of the dream of country gentlemen?

But county and so many pounds in the borough qualification, in the hope that an avalanche may whatever comes of the question of Reform, one be suspended when it has been let slip half-way thing is clear, the integrity of the old Conservative party is irretrievably destroyed. Lord Derby has declared his intention of signing. Who will be his successor! Will t be a "universal succession?" Undoubtedly not. I should say: the inheritance will have to be divided. The old Tory party, representing principles deeply rooted in the minds larged lasses in this country, will find its natural leaders in the men who have lately secreded from the present Cabinet, reinforced by others who will join them as soon as the spell of office is removed. But the more Liberal section of the rather than to the principles of Lord Cranborne, where will they find their natural place Pi. The case of the barque Scaton, probably ranked among the list of grievances on which the Taotai based his memorable despatch of the 17th January, claiming pity for the "many hundred minocent native merchants who had been brought to ruin" through the defalcations, nominally of Chinese compradores but, inferentially, of foreign merchants. And it must be admitted that ha had, here, some apparent ground of complaint:

Even an English court of law has declined to recognise the validity of the bond, so far as re-Even an English court of law has declined to recognise the validity of the bond, so far as regarded the hypothecation of the cargo; and to Chinese, unacquainted with the principle of bottomry, the detention of their property must have seemed singularly unjust. That the ship should come to a condign grief; was bad enough, but that, in addition to the loss and announce sustained through this delay, the cargo itself should be withheld from them to pay for her repairs, was an anomaly that called for vigorous protest.

Even an English court of law has declined to recognise the validity of the bond, so far as regarded the hypothecation of the cargo; and to future improvement.

It is time, however, to revert to the principle of the scheme, the policy of which has been defined by others, if not by Mr. Baxter. It has been said, for instance, that it is opposed to the intention of our electoral system. Which is that the men who represent the predominant body of opinion in a borough should represent that borough in Parliament. It is absurd, however, to talk of the framers of our electoral system.

The good offices of the Taotai were. as usual, invoked; and, as usual, His Excellency's ready pen was at the disposal of his suffering countrymen. The hardship of the case was pointed out to the British Consular authorities, and the unconditional release of the cargo sought. The case, however, was with Reform; to-day we witness a parallel already in the hands of the Court, and His Excellency was no doubt reminded, as partinently as in the case of Chequai's silk, that no interference with the due course of law could be recognised. This course has now been run, and he cargo released from durance. The Chief ludge was not satisfied that the Chinese had. had a fair opportunity of expressing formal assent or dissent from the proposed hypothecation of their cargo, and released them on this ground from liability. The view he has taken will, we think he generally concurred in. The conversational mention made by Mr. Vincent of the course he intended to pursue, might bive held good with Europeans, who clearly understood the position. But a very vast amount of explanation would be needed t lead Chinamen up to this point. Being utterly ignorant of the nature of British "respondentia" aw, they would immediately demur, as Mr. Vin cent admitted they did, when the suggestion of selling their cargo was made. With an equally vague notion that money would, somehow or other, be supplied by Insurance Companies, they would equally desire that the ship should repaired as soon as possible. And it would e manifestly unjust to hold them boun by expressions thus uttered in the dark. The loss that must ensue to the bond-holders is a hard one; but, as any informulity in the transac-

Political Partics in England.

A letter in the Times signed. "A Casservative M. P.," contains a great many interesting and thoughtful romarks on the present state of English parties, and the future classification to be expected, with many of which the generality of readers will probably disagree, but in some of which there is no doubt many future that Mr. Gladstone, after the optivable in the command the confidence of a new party be that Mr. Gladstone, after the optivable of many fluctuations of his career, and after be comed and will be such a party must be formed and will be come a letter as this from "a Conservative M. P." may be taken as one, of the signs of the times, foreshadowing this result.

But I had to be resorted to, to raise sufficient money, for her repairs. Was an admendent property of the times, foreshadowing this result.

But I had to be resorted to, to raise sufficient money, for her repairs. On the wisdom of the control of the contro ust, as Mr. Baxter allows it to be, or whether if is new, which is the fatal objection of other critics, but whether it is politic, conducive to good government, to the progress of sound legislation, and to the development of individual freedom Now, the House of Commons which practically rules us chooses the Executive, but its own functions are not executive; they are inquisitive deliberative, and legislative. The majority in the House will always choose the Executive, and have the ultimate decision in matters of legislation; for it is not pretended, and no one is so rrational as to wish, that any scheme of Cumula. tive Voting should affect the majority in the House. The imquisitive and deliberative functions of the Commons are, however, its especial attributes, distinguishing it by their excellence from all other Legislative Assemblies. They exist, and it is desirable that they should continue to exist. Without them good legislation is impossible. No one can tell like the wearer wherethe shoepinches, and no Assembly, however right-minded, can be trusted to go right unless it has within it representatives of all the classes t governs. If the American Congress treats he South with harshness, it is because no Southerner sits within the Capital; if the Corps Legislatif be ready to assist in suppressing the laws, it is because no spokesman is present to speak for those who suffer from their inconslity This, then, is that distinction between the functions of government and counsel which strangely enough has proved a stumbling block to professed students of our Constitution. The justification of the Cumulative Vote is, that it secures this diversity of counsel in the Legis. lative Chamber by a process so simple as to be intelligible to all, and so equal as to be free from be danger of destruction. It is true that we bave hitherto secured, although very imperfectly something of this diversity by an anomalous distribution of seats, but this compensation is passing away. And, at the best, how had is it! The Tory who sits for Oxfordshire or Essex does not represent the Conservative in Man. chester or Murylebone, and the Radical members for Manchester and Marylebone do not re-
